What kinds of waxes are typically used in candles? Our candles use the most commonly used candle wax which is paraffin. Beeswax, soy wax, palm wax, gels, and synthetic waxes are also frequently used in candles. Are certain candle waxes better than others? No. All types of quality candle waxes have been shown to burn cleanly, safely and in the same manner. U.S. candle manufacturers select waxes or blends of waxes based on their suitability for specific types of candles or formulation profiles, as well as their own candle-making preferences.
